

We contain multitudes – Discussion questions

A strong quality of classical literature is its universal relevance – people of all backgrounds, ages and genders find value, and something to relate to, in the novel.

Name three pieces of classical literature and explain why they are considered classics.

Using the definition above as your measure, would this novel qualify as classic literature?

Discuss three reasons why.

If it's not classic literature, what does this novel need to elevate it to a classic?

